What's Norton doing for the economy?

Let's get down to cases.

Case #1

Product: Star Tumblex®... a new line of Norton mass finishing abrasives that substantially reduces mass finishing costs.
Profile: Even as it wears down, Star Tumblex retains its unique tapered shape and the self-sharpening points continue to smooth and polish small and intricate surfaces with no need for additional smaller shapes or sizes to do the job.
Performance: Surface conditioners throughout industry are using Star Tumblex to achieve faster finishing cycles with less abrasive usage — as much as 2½ times less — and a lower cost per part.

Case #2

Product: Resinall Metalite® Type LB Belts for grinding stainless steel and high nickel alloy parts such as jet engine blades.
Profile: A special built-in lubricant reduces grinding temperatures up to 500°F., thereby preserving the surface integrity of the metal and increasing belt life from 2 to 6 times.
Performance: Customers find that this new abrasive belt not only takes the heat off dry grinding but actually cools costs up to 25%. Jet blade production increased by as much as 40%.

Case #3

Product: The world's largest commercial abrasive wheel ... provides the most economical method for steel mills to convert from steel blades for cutting large, rolled metal shapes.
Profile: Six feet tall and tough enough to cut through jet engine alloy rounds 11" thick in just 17 seconds, this giant wheel has a cutting speed of around 5½ sq. in. per second.
Performance: Compared with metal blade cold saws, the new Norton cut-off wheel reduced cutting time up to 66% and also provided substantial savings in equipment maintenance costs.

These are just a few examples of Norton's total abrasive capability. They translate into greater productivity and economy. Today, all over the world, wherever metals are removed, smoothed, finished, polished, machined or conditioned, Norton customers are doing it faster, easier, more profitably than ever. Norton Company: World Headquarters, Worcester, Massachusetts 01606.
